Re: PAGA Notice Pursuant to California Labor Code §2698 et seq.

Claimant(s): MIGUEL BARBOZA
Employer(s): EVERON, LLC

Dear Sir or Madam:

Miguel Barboza ("Claimant") has retained Nazo Koulloukian, Esq. of Koul Law Firm, APC, and Sahag Majarian, II, and Garen Majarian of Majarian Law Group, APC, to represent Claimant, and all other aggrieved employees, for conditions of employment and wage and hour claims against former employer, Everon, LLC (hereafter "Employer").

Employer operates a security solutions company. Claimant began working for Employer in April 2023 as an installation technician at Employer's Los Angeles location. Claimant works as an hourly, nonexempt employee earning approximately $32.75 an hour.

Claimant alleges herein the specific provisions of California law that Employer has violated, requiring this Notice, including but not limited to: California Labor Code sections 201-203, 204, 208, 216, 221-223, 226, 226.2, 226.7, 245-248.6, 432, 432.5, 432.6, 432.7, 510, 512, 558, 558.1, 1024.5, 1174, 1194, 1197, 1197.1, 1198, 1198.5, 1199, 2802, 2810.5, and all applicable Wage Orders.

During Claimant's employment, Claimant personally experienced the Labor Code violations described below. We request that your agency investigate the claims alleged below or permit Claimant to seek civil penalties under the Private Attorney General Act on behalf of the Labor and Workforce and development Agency and the State of California in a representative action. This letter will serve as notice of these allegations pursuant to Labor Code § 2699.3.

Failure to Pay For All Hours Worked, Including Overtime Hours Worked

(Cal. Labor Code §§200, 204, 206, 206.5, 207, 210, 216, 218, 218.6, 221, 223, 351, 510, 558, 1194, 1197, 1197.1, 1198, 2698 et seq., IWC Wage Orders)

The Wage Orders define "hours worked" as "the time during which an employee is subject to the control of an employer, and including all the time the employee is suffered or permitted to work, whether or not required to do so." Employer has been engaged in many unlawful employment practices which resulted in underpayment for hours worked each pay period, including overtime hours worked based on the employees regular rate of pay, as more fully set forth below. Employer has also failed to pay the required minimum wage for all hours worked, and has failed to pay all wages owed twice per month.

Claimant and aggrieved employees have been employed under conditions prohibited by the wage order, and thus Employer has also violated §§1198 and 1199. Employer is liable for civil penalties pursuant to Labor Code §§558 and 2698 et seq.

Off-the-Clock Hours Worked

Claimant and aggrieved employees frequently worked off the clock and were routinely subjected to periods wherein they were under the Employer's control but not compensated for their time.

Employer frequently calls employees during their commutes, while they are off-the-clock, to discuss scheduling and work-related tasks.

Claimant and aggrieved employees are not paid for the first fifty minutes of their daily drive time, despite being required to use an Employer-provided car, input their destination in the GPS and mark themselves as "en route" via Employer's "tech portal" app prior to departure. GPS tracking information can be monitored by Employer and customers, allowing customers to see employees' home address and route. Additionally, when returning home at the end of the workday, Claimant and his coworkers are not paid for the first fifty minutes of their commute, following completion of their final service stop. As a result of these practices, approximately two hours of compensable time are deducted from employee pay each workday. Further, Employer contacts employees during their commutes regarding their route, indicating control over employees during this commute. For example, Employer has frequently contacted Claimant during his commute when he is already en route to a jobsite, telling him that his schedule has been changed and to change course.

Unpaid Wages – Rounding

Employer rounds Claimant and aggrieved employee timecards in a manner that favors Employer.

Each Tuesday, Employer's management texts employees asking whether there are any "meal corrections." Employees who took a late meal period are expected to report it to management so that the time record can be "fixed." However, if employees are truthful and report that they in fact took a late meal period, they are subject to disciplinary action, including written warnings. As a result, employees are discouraged from accurately reporting late meal periods. Additionally, on multiple occasions, Employer has altered time records without Claimant's knowledge or authorization. These practices result in inaccurate timekeeping records and the unlawful denial of wages and premium pay owed under California law.

Predictability Pay

Certain municipalities, including the City of Los Angeles, require employers to provide advance notice of work schedules and to pay additional wages when employers make short-notice, employer-initiated changes to employee schedules. Employer routinely makes last-minute changes to employees' work schedules without providing timely or adequate advance notice, resulting in the failure to pay all wages earned and due. These schedule changes occur without notification, sometimes as late as the morning of an employee's assignment, and cause employees to report to work, have hours reduced or canceled, or work hours different from their previously posted schedules without receiving all required compensation. As a result, Employer failed to pay all wages owed in violation of Labor Code section 1194, failed to timely pay earned wages in the applicable pay period in violation of Labor Code section 204, and issued wage statements that did not accurately reflect all wages earned in violation of Labor Code section 226(a).

For example, on December 23, 2025, Claimant arrived at a jobsite at approximately 8:00 a.m., having been scheduled to work at that location December 23 through December 24. Upon arrival, the customer informed Claimant that they had already reported to Employer that the site would be closed on December 24, 2025, and not to schedule a technician on that day. Claimant contacted Employer at approximately 8:10 a.m., and the office confirmed that his schedule would be updated, resulting in less than 24 hours' notice of the schedule change. Despite the short-notice cancellation and modification of scheduled hours, Claimant did not receive all wages earned as a result of the schedule change, nor were such wages timely paid or accurately itemized on wage statements.

Similar last-minute schedule modifications occurred frequently, including instances where employees would check assignments in the morning before departure, but were then contacted by management during their commute and informed that their schedule had been changed. These employer-initiated schedule changes caused employees to work hours that differed from their previously posted schedules or had scheduled hours reduced, without receiving the additional compensation required when work time was added, changed, or cut on short notice, without payment of all wages earned, giving rise to civil penalties under Labor Code section 2699.

Improper Calculation of Overtime Rate – Failure to Pay Overtime Wages

(Cal. Lab. Code §§218, 510 et. seq., 1194)

Employer pays additional compensation such as shift premiums and/or nondiscretionary bonuses to its hourly, non-exempt employees. It is well established that nondiscretionary bonuses retroactively increase the employee's "regular rate" of pay for purposes of calculating overtime. (Labor Code §207) The "regular rate" is calculated by dividing the hours worked in a week by all the compensation earned for that week. When an employee is later paid a bonus that is partly due to work performed in that week, this additional pay must be added into the total compensation for the week, increasing the employee's regular rate of pay. (Marin v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (2008) 169 CA4th 804, 807.)

For nondiscretionary bonuses:

Employer pays bonuses, including nondiscretionary bonuses as an incentive for meeting quotas. These nondiscretionary payments were not incorporated into aggrieved employees' regular rate of pay for purposes of calculating overtime, sick pay, vacation wages, or meal and rest period premium pay.

Failure to Pay All Wages Owed Twice Per Month

(Cal. Lab. Code §§204, 210, and 2698 et seq.)

Employer was required to pay Claimant and aggrieved employees all wages earned twice during each calendar month pursuant to Labor Code §204(a).

Employer failed to pay all wages earned to employees as a result of the unlawful employment policies and practices discussed herein. As a result of these practices, employees were underpaid for hours worked, including overtime and premium wages, and this underpayment resulted in a failure to pay all wages owed twice per month.

Due to these failures, Employer is liable under Labor Code §204, 210 and 2698 et seq. for failure to pay wages as required by law.

Failure to Pay Minimum Wage

(Cal. Labor Code §§ 200, 218.5, 226, 558, 1194, 1194.2, 1197, 1197.2, 1198, 1199, 2698 et seq.)

Pursuant to Labor Code sections 1194, 1194.2 and 1197, it is unlawful for an employer to suffer or permit a California employee to work without paying wages at the proper minimum wage for all time worked as required by the applicable IWC Wage Order.

Employer failed to pay Claimant and aggrieved employees for all hours worked as a result of Employer's practices described above. Based on Employer's unlawful conduct described herein, and because Claimant and the aggrieved employees were paid at or near minimum wage, employer's failure to pay for all hours worked, including overtime, resulted in a payment of less than the minimum wage for all hours worked, in violation of Labor Code §1197, 1197.1, 1199 and the Wage Orders. Employer is liable for civil penalties pursuant to Labor Code §§558 and 2698 et seq.

Failure to Pay Wages Due Upon Termination

(Cal. Lab. Code §§201, 202, 203, 227.3 and 2698 et seq.)

An employee who is discharged must be paid all of his or her wages, including accrued vacation, immediately at the time of termination. (Labor Code Sections 201 and 227.3.) As set forth above, Employer knowingly and willfully failed to pay all compensation due and owing to Claimant at the time employment terminated.

Employer willfully failed to pay employees who are no longer employed by it all compensation due upon termination of employment as required by Cal. Lab. Code §§201 and 202. Claimant and similarly situated individuals are now entitled to recover up to thirty (30) days pay as waiting time under the terms of §203. Moreover, Employer is liable for civil penalties pursuant to Cal. Lab. Code § 2698 et. seq.

Failure to Permit Compliant Meal Periods

(Cal. Labor Code §§226 (a), 226.7, 512, 558, 1198, 2698 et seq., Wage Order)

Labor Code §512 provides, "[a]n employer may not employ an employee for a work period of more than five hours per day without providing the employee with a meal period of not less than 30 minutes…" Labor Code §226.7(a) provides, "[n]o employer shall require an employee to work during any meal… period mandated by an applicable order of the Industrial Welfare Commission." Paragraph 11 of the Wage Order provides, in pertinent part, "[u]nless an employee is relieved of all duty during a 30-minute meal period, the meal period shall be considered an 'on duty' meal period and counted as time worked."

Employer failed to permit Claimant and others to take timely, off-duty, meal breaks of "not less than 30 minutes" for each five consecutive hours of work in violation of Labor Code §§226.7 and 512. When meal periods were noncompliant, Employer failed to pay all premium pay to Claimant and aggrieved employees at their regular rates of pay. As a derivative claim, Claimant alleges that pay statements were inaccurate, failing to include required meal period penalties, thus failing the requirements of Labor Code §226(a).

Full, uninterrupted, off-duty, thirty-minute meal periods were not provided because Employer: (1) did not account for all hours worked that were unaccounted for on their timecard; (2) did not adequately inform and train employees about their rights to meal periods and premium payments for non-compliant meal periods; (3) did not adequately inform and train employees about when, where and how to take timely and uninterrupted thirty-minute meal periods; (4) because Employer did not staff enough people to schedule all timely and uninterrupted thirty-minute meal periods; (5) because management at various levels, affecting all hourly, non-exempt employees, refused to offer, permit, or enforce a lawfully compliant meal period policy; and/or (6) because Employer unlawfully shaved and/or rounded clock in and clock out times for meal periods.

Employees were not paid a premium payment, paid as an hour's wage when meal periods were not given to them in compliance with California law.

Aggrieved employees regularly worked shifts of 10–12 hours per day, during which Employer required them to clock out for meal periods but continue working or remain under Employer's control by driving to subsequent customer appointments. Additionally, Employer consistently failed to provide Claimant and his coworkers with the mandatory second meal period required during shifts exceeding 10 hours.

Failure to Provide Rest Breaks

(Cal. Labor Code §§226, 226.7, 512, 558, 1198, 2698 et seq., Wage Orders)

Employer failed to maintain a compliant rest period policy and practice that provides its employees with off-duty rest periods as required by California law. Claimant reports that employees frequently missed rest periods as a result of Employer's staffing and business practices, and that rest breaks were not scheduled into daily shifts.

Here, Claimant and aggrieved employees were frequently required to work through rest breaks. They were not permitted or able to take rest breaks during service calls, and we often required to work through their rest breaks to travel between customer locations.

Rest periods were either less than ten minutes, not provided, interrupted or late, "on duty," or not scheduled before and after a meal period for shifts greater than six hours, as prescribed by California law because Employer: (1) did not account for all hours worked that were unaccounted for on their timecard; (2) did not adequately inform and train employees about their rights to rest breaks and premium payments for non-compliant rest breaks; (3) did not adequately inform and train employees about when, where and how to take timely and uninterrupted ten-minute rest breaks; (4) because Employer did not staff enough people to schedule all timely and uninterrupted ten-minute rest breaks; and/or (5) because management at various levels, affecting all hourly, non-exempt employees, refused to offer, permit, or enforce a lawfully compliant rest break policy.

The rest period requirement obligates employers to permit and authorize employees to take off-duty rest periods, meaning employers must relieve employees of all duties and relinquish control over how employees spend their time. Augustus v. ABM Security Services, Inc., (2016) 5 Cal.5th 257, 269. Employers must pay employees an additional hour of wages at the employee's regular rate of pay for each missed or improper rest period (e.g., less than 10 minutes, interrupted rest period, rest period(s) at improper time(s) during shift(s). Lab. Code §226.7; applicable IWC Wage Order, §12(B) ("If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest period in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Order, the employer shall pay the employee one (1) hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work day that the rest period is not provided"). Moreover, under California law rest periods must be a "net" ten minutes in a suitable rest area. (Id. at 268) (relying on January 3, 1986 and February 22, 2002 DLSE Letters wherein the DLSE ruled that the net ten-minute language for rest periods means ten minutes of time in a rest area and cannot include time it takes to get to and from the rest area). The employer must show that it clearly articulates the right to a net ten minutes, which means it must clearly communicate what "net" ten minutes means (i.e., regardless of what happens along the way to and from a rest area, employees are entitled to a full ten minutes of rest in the rest area). Id.; see also, Bufil v. Dollar Fin. Grp., Inc., (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1193, 1199 (the "onus is on the employer to clearly communicate the authorization and permission [to take rest periods] to their employees.").

Employer did not authorize or permit all of its hourly employees to take at least a ten minute rest period in which they were relieved of all duties, for every 4 hours of work, or major fraction thereof, as required by Cal. Lab. Code §226.7, §512 and the Wage Orders. When breaks were missed Employer failed to pay the 1-hour premium, as required.

Failure to Provide Accurate Itemized Wage Statements
(Cal. Labor Code §§ 226, 1174, 2698 et seq)

Employer knowingly and intentionally failed to provide timely, accurate, itemized wage statements to Claimant and the aggrieved employees in accordance with Labor Code §§ 226 and keep accurate records as required by §1174(d).

Derivative of the claims above, the statements provided to Claimant and aggrieved employees, and the records maintained by Employer, have not accurately reflected actual gross wages earned, including pay for all hours worked and the accurate rate of pay for all hours worked, and overtime pay, sick pay at the correct rate, and pay for meal and rest period premium wages.

§226 (a) requires:

> An employer, semimonthly or at the time of each payment of wages, shall furnish to his or her employee, either as a detachable part of the check, draft, or voucher paying the employee's wages, or separately if wages are paid by personal check or cash, an accurate itemized statement in writing showing (1) gross wages earned, (2) total hours worked by the employee, except as provided in subdivision (j), (3) the number of piece-rate units earned and any applicable piece rate if the employee is paid on a piece-rate basis, (4) all deductions, provided that all deductions made on written orders of the employee may be aggregated and shown as one item, (5) net wages earned, (6) the inclusive dates of the period for which the employee is paid, (7) the name of the employee and only the last four digits of his or her social security number or an employee identification number other than a social security number, (8) the name and address of the legal entity that is the employer and, if the employer is a farm labor contractor, as defined in subdivision (b) of Section 1682, the name and address of the legal entity that secured the services of the employer, and (9) all applicable hourly > rates in effect during the pay period and the corresponding number of hours worked at each hourly rate by the employee…

Such failures caused injury to Claimant and others, by, among other things, impeding them from knowing the true legal name of their employer, the total hours worked, and the amount of wages to which they are and were entitled. Employer knowingly and intentionally failed to accurately itemize the gross wages earned, net wages earned, and total hours worked.

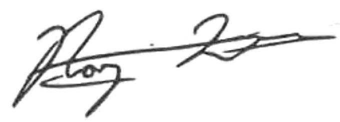
Employer is liable for civil penalties pursuant to Labor Code § 2698 et seq.

Finally, Employer has violated Labor Code §432.5 for forcing Claimant and aggrieved employees to sign employment-related contracts and documents that contained unlawful terms of employment, including invalid meal period waivers resulting from a noncompliant meal period policy and/or practice.

Conclusion

Employer has violated a number of California wage and hour laws and is therefore liable for civil penalties pursuant to Cal. Labor Code §2698 et seq. Claimant respectfully requests that the agency investigate the above allegations and hereby provides notice of the allegations pursuant to PAGA's provisions. Alternatively, Claimant requests that the agency inform Claimant if it does not intend to investigate these violations so that Claimant may pursue these claims as a representative action in civil court.

Sincerely,



Nazo Koulloukian, Esq.
